Personal Bio:

Tamisha Delvaille, a first generation American, was born in Brooklyn, New York after her family immigrated from the Caribbean. They moved to Texas when she was about seven years old where she lived until she left to attend school at Dartmouth College. She attended Thurgood Marshall School of Law. Upon graduation in 2000, she returned to Houston to begin clerking. Tamisha and her husband, Nedzad Adolovic have been married for two years. Her interests include reading, volleyball and traveling. As a civilian contractor, Tamisha worked as with the military in Iraq for 4 years and in Afghanistan for 1.5 years.

Business Bio:

Tamisha runs a professional practice that specializes in the area of Family Law, Wills, Personal injury and Parole Revocation. She is dedicated to providing the highest quality of legal service to families in an efficient, timely and cost effective manner. Tamisha found herself drawn to the study of law directly out of high school. Her curiosity would lead her to her first internship while still in college at Skadden Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom. Subsequent employment at other prestigious law firms such as Baker & Botts and Jenkins & Gilchrist would soon follow. Although her work focused primarily on Toxic Torts including Breast Implant, Tobacco, and Asbestos, she also performed extensive work in Oil & Gas, Banking, General litigation and some Criminal law. Upon graduation from law school, her focus shifted to Family Law, Personal Injury and Parole Revocations as her specialty.
