Personal Bio

Reed was born and raised in New Orleans, Louisiana. He received his B.A. in U.S. History from Brown University in 1991. After working and traveling on the African continent several years, Reed returned to the states, and in 1998 graduated with a J.D. from the Martin Luther King Jr. School of Law at University of California at Davis. In law school he was a two-time King Hall Public Interest Foundation Grant Recipient and Editor of the Journal of Juvenile Law and Policy. Parenting two active and dynamic teenagers, Reed enjoys mountain biking, rock climbing, surfing, off-the-grid travel, parrots, sustainable living and reading. His community service has included coaching the Rhode Island Special Olympics soccer team to two national championships and serving as a court-appointed Special Advocate and Guardian ad Litem in California and Utah.

Business Bio

Reed practices law in Utah and California. Since 2003, he has resided in Salt Lake City. Reed is a 'jack of all trades' in civil practice with emphasis on estate planning for blended families, business planning and divorce litigation. Reed prides himself on solving problems and delivering peace of mind in a thoughtful straightforward way. He aims to provide value and certainty so clients and their families can proceed worry-free living happy lives.
